FENG SHUI AND WELLNESS

Diana Garber Spoke with Students at Otterbein College

Diana Garber was asked to facilitate a workshop for Otterbein College students enrolled in an integrative medicine course. The workshop took place November 4 and 6 and involved classic Feng Shui's impact on health and wellness. In addition to presenting a client's case study, Diana discussed quantum energy impacts that go well beyond what most think of as "a health area."

Garber said, "Energy is based on the five elements. As an example, imbalance in the South of a building can target the heart and eyes. If this is a commercial site, this may affect commitment and vision. If a residential site, occupants may experience heart or eye problems". There are also vulnerabilities for individuals based on their particular energy. "A person's birth date determines their element. Someone born as a water element is predisposed to blood issues such as diabetes or anemia". One of the students shared that he is a water sign and does, in fact, have diabetes.
